Benefits for study in Poland

The attractiveness of Germany as an education destination for international students is determined by five key drivers:

- Quality of education
- Education accessibility / entry barriers
- Personal security
- Lifestyle
- Employment prospects

Quality of education

As one of the world's largest and technologically advanced economies, Germany is a very attractive academic destination. Its leading position in research and development as well as excellent standards of teaching account for Germany's excellent reputation of being a high quality education provider.

Education accessibility

In the past years, entry barriers for international students have been decreased by the introduction of Bachelor and Master Programmes in Germany, adapted to international standards and credit systems. International accreditation of programmes plays a decisive role in student placement, as the majority of students return to their home country. Thus, the degree received abroad is only of value to the student if it is acknowledged in their country of origin.

Personal security & lifestyle

Germany is a very attractive living environment due to a high level of perceived safety. Moreover, Germany - the geographic "heart of Europe" - disposes of a rich cultural and historical background. Due to a very well developed infrastructure, the country enjoys an ideal location for living and studying. This attractive living environment combined with Germany being a technologically highly developed nation, makes any study abroad experience in Germany a memorable experience.

Employment prospects

In Germany, employment prospects heavily depend on the economic situation. However there is an increasing need for highly trained and qualified employees, which are also being recruited from the international labour market.

We will receive commission of 12% on the one year tuition fee and it will be shared with the associates.

Thanks
